WASHINGTON (AP) — President Donald Trump is preparing to sign a bill authorizing a $12.8 billion budget increase to pay for more weapons and soldiers in Afghanistan, according to people with knowledge of the discussions. The legislation would cover the rest of 2018 without setting a deadline to withdraw U.S. troops, an invitation to the Taliban to resume peace talks and a deadline for other countries to contribute to paying for the country's reconstruction. The bill is due to be signed on Friday, when Trump is expected to receive the services of Defense Secretary Jim Mattis, who left the White House on Thursday afternoon after more than 30 years of working there, the longest tenure of any secretary of defense. ADVERTISEMENT Congressional leaders are discussing authorizing the spending at the very moment that there are four key U.S. officials involved in talks with the Taliban. They are the Taliban's chief diplomat, Zalmay Khalilzad, a former U.S. ambassador to Afghanistan, a U.S. special envoy and the secretary of State, Mike Pompeo. Although there has been a long-standing talk of withdrawing U.S. forces and ending the 17-year-old war, military and foreign policy experts believe it's premature to know when or whether the United States will draw down more soldiers. "I don't think we have to get specific about the number," said Rep. Ro Khanna, D-Calif., a member of the House Armed Services Committee. "I just think it's important to recognize the growing success of the Afghan government, the significant reduction in the violence and the security gains in the country." The legislation differs from past funding deals in that it doesn't set a deadline to withdraw, which has been a major sticking point between the White House and congressional Republicans and even between Trump and Afghanistan's new president. The talks are scheduled to continue as Mattis and Khalilzad host a meeting of the four parties in Qatar on Friday f30f4ceada
