This new technology has never been used in a FIFA title before. The new technology is based on a global motion capture data set of professional athletes from leading sporting franchises to ensure that the data faithfully reproduces in-game human motion. The data is used to improve the player animations, create improved player visual models and build a realistic passing system. Additionally, it can be used to create more complex AI routines and automatic coaching. The data collected can also be used to improve the game's artificial intelligence system. During the validation of the technology, FIFA 22 used an unprecedented number of motion capture tests with a fleet of 22 professional footballers who were battling for the supremacy of FIFA. The high-intensity sequence, tested on a professional motion capture system developed by eKnee, featured a series of intense clashes, duels and finishes for each player. The team focused on refining the interactions between players, with particular attention to movement, collisions, and ball interactions. A key task was to ensure the reactivity of the new character models, which would ensure that players better look convincing and natural when reacting to sudden events. An additional element to the gameplay was the inclusion of Havoc™, the system designed to realistically model the impact of physical collisions in the game. AI routines have been improved to better track and keep up with the player's movements. A video tutorial demonstrating the technology can be seen here. HyperMotion technology in FIFA 22 Players now react more realistically and physical collisions are modelled realistically, based on the data captured during the test. The actions of the ball are also tuned and directly influenced by the speed and direction of the player's movements. The new player models, also based on the data obtained during the test, are more fluid and cover a range of body types. The new player models and animations have improved facial features that better reproduce the players' expressions. The artificial intelligence routines have been improved to better track and keep up with the player's movements. The new technology is being used to improve the game's AI routines to better challenge players during FIFA Ultimate Team Seasons and FIFA Ultimate Team Competitions. This will include improved data for player simulations and coaching. New Player Shapes A new player shape technology is introduced in FIFA 22 to make players more responsive and adaptive. First, teams are represented by their favourite players, whereas in FIFA 20 the matches always involved the top five

- Angry Bird theme if you are in This Game In FIFA 22, you cannot use any other video card except for nVidia. You will need a high-end model, in most cases, it will need a 9800GX2 to be able to take advantage of FUT, even if it's relatively old not as powerful as the 9800GTX. People have suggested that the Anti-Aliasing can be turned on, but I just played a handful of games with (Antialiasing turned off) so I don't know what it can do. I'm not really sure if the Visor has separate hardware render settings or not but you need to use a high end nVidia video card for Enhanced
